STANDARD or TREE ROSES

What does the most toward making a good plant? The answer certainly is — a good root system. IXL unquestionably makes the best cane but when grown as usual from cuttings has miserable roots. To remedy this we bud the IXL on Odorata which has an unexcelled root system. Then we insert four buds at 36 inches to make a strong, well-balanced head.

All this costs money, but results in the finest tree rose that can be grown!

All orders have now been filled or the plants set aside and an accurate count made of what is left. Apparently some errors were made in earlier tabulations as we find fairly good numbers of some varieties that we thought were sold out.
